Rather than an article gunning for the Western neoliberal establishment and its detrimental effects on a particular aspect of African society, I would like to take a more pensive stance on an issue that many of us, to me at least, seem to have assimilated and normalised into our daily lives. In light of this, we have we have contacted all the candidates standing in both the Leadership and Deputy Leadership elections for The Green Part of England and Wales, asking them to explain their vision for the Labour Party and the country and we will be publishing their responses over the week leading to the elections. She nodded, her fingers moving to her bloodstained blouse, where she fidgeted with a button.
