To my mind, to kill in war is not a whit better than to commit ordinary murder. They can take significant satisfaction in developing bonds of partnership and friendship and feel free of concerns about being double-crossed.

Oneexample should suffice. Here we can note how the characteristics of the cultural context deeply influence not only our living conditions but, more importantly, our "patterns of thought and action"; consequently, many concepts that might appear natural and to be taken for granted are actually the product of our cultural evolution. It takes a definite length of time, the period of adjustment, before the market is completely adjusted to the new state of affairs.
