In a very real sense, the prologue provides a profound and highly developed theological summary that has a structural integrity of its own, while also introducing many of the key themes of the Gospel account that follows. In the complication the audience is immediately drawn into the drama of the divine mission of Jesus the Son of God. In Israelite-Jewish history, the themes of divine necessity and election occur in the context of God's activity on behalf of his people, called "salvation history.
